Myanmar exports 50,000 bags of rice to China via Muse border trade daily with new permit

MYANMAR is exporting around 50,000 bags of rice and broken rice a day to China via Muse border trade zone with a new permit system, said Vice-Chair U Min Thein of the Muse Rice Wholesale Centre.

“After 1 March, around 80 or 90 truckloads of about 45,000 or 50,000 rice and broken rice bags are being exported daily to China,” according to the Vice Chairman.

The Chinese government has granted rice export licences for this year through Muse border trade zone to 47 companies on 26 February, according to the Muse Rice Wholesale Centre.

There will be increased rice and broken rice export value to China this year than last year as Chinese government issued more rice licences to more companies this year. However, there may also be some difficulty to transfer the money when we export the rice to China because of the current situation, he added.

Myanmar earned over US$ 275 million from exports of over 720,000 tonnes of rice and broken rice in the first three months of this financial year (1 October to 15 January), according to Myanmar Rice Federation (MRF).

However, Myanmar has expected to export only 2 million tonnes of rice in this FY because the weather changes affected irrigation water and consequently, summer paddy cultivation will have to be reduced, said U Ye Min Aung, the Chairman of Myanmar Rice Federation (MRF).

Myanmar generated over $ 800 million from rice export in the previous FY-2019-2020 ending 30 September with an estimated volume of over 2.5 million tonnes. —NN/GNLM

Uphold spirit of solidarity and coordination to cope with challenges

With competition from the world's powerful countries and geographically strategic location, the ASEAN region faces conventional security challenges.

Meanwhile, non-traditional security challenges such as climate change, food security, health security, scarce resources, natural disasters, irregular migrant worker issue, human trafficking, drug smuggling, information security, piracy, transnational crime, terrorism and pandemic have become key issues affecting the shared vulnerability of ASEAN and its people.

Terrorism and the COVID-19 global pandemic are making the leaders and policymakers in the region much harder.

Amidst the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, terrorism continues to pose a critical threat to our region's peace and security, and it has alerted us to make greater cooperation among the ASEAN countries to eliminate the menace in all its forms.

Terrorism and the COVID-19 global pandemic are making the leaders and policymakers in the region much harder.

Hence, as part of the economic recovery in the post-COVID-19 period, we need to focus on the revival of old businesses to bring back livelihoods and to explore new businesses models through innovation and complementarities by taking into account the new normal life. Other challenges we are facing today are Immigration, and administrative weaknesses, lack of complete monitoring of illegal cash flow, rampant drug smuggling, which is the major income source of terrorists in the region, and mass accumulation of weapons from the other regions are major obstacles to fighting terrorism in the ASEAN region.

To overcome all traditional and non-traditional challenges, ASEAN member countries are urged to make stronger cooperation and to seek a solution in a concerted and coordinated effort rather than in an individual effort. This year's theme of ASEAN, "We Care, We Prepare, We Prosper", which underscores the importance of fostering the well-being of people, is calling for the ASEAN members to prepare for future opportunities and uncertainties, as well as prosper together as a unified region while upholding the spirit of solidarity and coordination among member countries.

Do not use weather as a basis to relax COVID-19 control measures, UN agency urges

THE UN weather agency on Thursday cautioned that the current onset of warmer temperatures in the northern hemisphere should not be used as a trigger to relax measures to halt the spread of coronavirus.

In a new report, the UN World Meteorological Organization (WMO) highlighted that contrary to popular assumptions about warm weather dampening viral spread, infections rose in late spring – and that "there is no evidence" that this year would be any different.

"At this stage, evidence does not support the use of meteorological and air quality factors as a basis for governments to relax their interventions aimed at reducing transmission," Ben Zaitchik, co-chair of an interdisciplinary and international WMO Task Team that produced the report, said.

"We saw waves of infection rise in warm seasons and warm regions in the first year of the pandemic, and there is no evidence that this couldn't happen again in the coming year," Mr Zaitchik, from the Department of Earth and Planetary Sciences, Johns Hopkins University, added. The report highlighted that COVID-19 transmission dynamics last year appear to have been controlled primarily by government interventions rather than meteorological factors.

Other relevant drivers include changes in human behaviour and demographics of affected populations, and more recently, virus mutations.

Infection seasonality 'not yet well understood'

The report looked at the potential role of seasonality, as respiratory viral infections, like cold or influenza frequently show some form of seasonality, such as the autumn-winter peak for influenza in temperate climates. This led to speculation that, if it persists for many years, COVID-19 could be a strongly seasonal disease.

"It is premature to draw conclusions for the COVID-19 virus", WMO said.

The underlying mechanisms that drive seasonality of respiratory viral infections are not yet well understood, according to the report.

"A combination of direct impacts on virus survival, impacts on human resistance to infection, and indirect influence of weather and season via changes in human behaviour may be at work", it said, noting that laboratory studies of COVID-19 causing SARS-CoV-2 virus "yielded some evidence that the virus survives longer under cold, dry, and low ultraviolet radiation conditions".

"However, these studies have not yet indicated if direct meteorological influences on the virus have a meaningful influence on transmission rates under real world conditions", the report added.

Air quality influence 'still inconclusive'

The Task Team further noted that the evidence on the influence of air quality factors is still inconclusive. It said that there is "some preliminary evidence" that poor air quality increases COVID-19 mortality rates, but not that pollution directly impacts airborne transmission of the SARS-CoV-2 virus. The report also noted that at present there is no direct, peer reviewed evidence of pollution impacts on the airborne viability of the virus.

Payment startups big winners of e-commerce boom

THEY were little known before the pandemic, but startups in the flourishing digital payment industry are now worth a fortune as Covid-19 has forced people to increasingly embrace e-commerce.

Online shopping, contactless card readers and mobile payments are nothing new, but lockdowns and fears of contagion changed consumer behaviour during the coronavirus crisis.

"2020 considerably accelerated the shift in consumer preferences to electronic payments and online shopping," said Marc-Henri Desportes, deputy CEO of Worldline, a French payment and transactions processing firm.

A trio of startups -- Stripe, SumUp and Pledg -- have benefited from the shift.

Founded by two Irish brothers in 2011, Stripe catapulted to the forefront of the industry after its valuation soared to $95 billion in the past week, nearly tripling since last year.

However, it still has a long way to catch up to the likes of Mastercard, valued above $300 billion.

The California-based payments processing firm reached its new valuation after raising $600 million in funding from investors last weekend.

On Tuesday, the British startup SumUp, which provides card payment terminals and on-line services, raised 750 million euros in funding.

On the same day, the Paris-based startup Pledg, which specializes in installment payment services, raised 80 million euros.

"We've done in one year a transformation which would in normal times take three or five years," said Desportes.

PayPal and We Chat

According to a study by the consulting firm Accenture published last year, global payments revenue may rise by $500 billion over the coming years to hit $2 trillion in 2025.

The biggest names in the sector include US firms PayPal, Apple Pay and Visa, and China's WeChat Pay and Alipay.

Others on the rise include US firm Square and Dutch-based Adyen.

Stripe's "recent valuation is maybe a signal that the accelerating forces of Covid are going to actually make it a lot easier for fintechs to sort of become more successful with greater market share," said Matt Palframan, director of financial services research at survey and data firm YouGov.

"The really interesting thing ... is to what extent do consumers go back to how they were living before Covid as we emerge from the crisis and to what extent some of this behavioural change is permanent," he added.

That question is crucial for fintechs (finance technology companies) like Stripe, which helps online retailers with payments processing, said Palframan.

Value up for grabs

It is also important for the other firms that offer accessory services like multifactor authentication, loyalty programmes and instalment payments which are becoming more and more popular among retailers.

With commissions for each transaction low, volume becomes key to becoming profitable.

For example, a payments processor like Worldline handles 10 billion transactions per year for retailers.

"There is value up for grabs, particularly from merchants who are already used to handing over several percentage points of transactions to the payment processor," said Thomas Rocafull, a consultant at Sia Partners.

But retailers also stand to gain. "Once a client has made the effort to enter his payment details in an electronic wallet or app, they'll probably think twice before changing," he added.

Fishery exports plunge to $380.65 mln in 2020-2021FY

EXPORT earnings from the fisheries sector during the period between 1 October and 5 March in the financial year 2020-2021 touched a low of US$380.65 million, a decrease of $47.8 million from the year-ago period, according to statistics released by the Commerce Ministry.

The figures stood at just $428.457 million during a year-ago period.

Myanmar Fisheries Federation (MFF) expected to earn more than $800 million from fishery exports in the FY2019-2020, and it reached a target.

Myanmar exports fisheries products, such as fish, prawns, and crabs, to markets in 40 countries, including China, Saudi Arabia, the US, Japan, Singapore, Thailand, and countries in the European Union.

Myanmar's fishery exports have slightly declined over the past months, owing to the COVID-19 impacts and the current trade delay amid the political changes.

Additionally, the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) and the World Health Organization (WHO) issued guidelines to ensure food safety during the COVID-19 pandemic in April 2020.

The permitted companies are advised to carry out food safety plans, follow the WHO

and FAO guidelines, formulate the safety management system, and suspend the exports if any suspicious foodborne virus or virus infection risk are found in the products. They can resume the exports once the products meet food safety criteria set by the General Administration of Customs of China's People Republic (GACC).

China is the second-largest buyer of Myanmar's fishery products, accounting for US$254 million out of the overall fishery export value of $850 million in the financial year 2019-2020.

The federation expects to reach a fishery export target of US$1 billion in the current FY2020-2021.

The MFF is making concerted efforts to increase fishery export earnings by developing fish farming lakes that meet international standards and adopting advanced fishing techniques.

To ensure food safety, the foreign market requires suppliers to obtain Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Points (HACCP) and Good Aquaculture Practices (GAQP) certificates.

To meet international market standards, fishery products must be sourced only from hatcheries that are compliant with GAQP. The MFF works with fish farmers, processors, and the Fisheries Department under the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock, and Irrigation to develop the GAQP system.

Processors can screen fishery products for food safety at ISO-accredited laboratories under the Fisheries Department.

There are 480,000 acres of fish and prawn breeding farms across the country and more than 120 cold-storage facilities in Myanmar.

Myanmar exported 340,000 tonnes of fishery products worth $530 million in the 2013-2014FY, 330,000 tonnes worth $480 million in the 2014-2015FY, 360,000 tonnes worth $500 million in the 2015-2016FY, 430,000 tonnes worth $600 million in the 2016-2017FY, 560,000 tonnes worth $700 million in the 2017-2018FY, 580,000 tonnes worth over $730 million in the 2018-2019FY and $847.5 million, according to the Commerce Ministry.

An MFF official said the federation had asked the government to tackle problems faced in exporting farm-raised fish and prawns through G2G pacts and ensuring smooth freight movement between countries to bolster exports.

Myanmar's economy is more dependent on the agricultural sector to a large extent. Also, the fisheries sector contributes a lot to the national gross domestic product (GDP). Its fishery production, including shrimps and saltwater and freshwater fish, is far better than the regional countries. If the government can boost processing technology, it will contribute to the country's economy and earn more income for those stakeholders in the supply chain, Yangon Region Fisheries Department stated. — KK/GNLM

Teak seedlings grown for tree planting season this year

THE Agriculture Department in Htilin township is cultivating the teak seedlings for planting them in the Forest Department's gardens in this year's monsoon tree planting season.

"Rain provides a good opportunity for seedlings to flourish. About 30,000 seedlings of teak are ready for growing as soon as the monsoon arrives. The department has already planted 10,000 seedlings of teak in Htilin town garden, 10,000 seedlings of teak in Ye Myatni village garden and 10,000 seedlings of teak in Kyin village garden," said an official from Township Forest Department.

Moreover, the department has 400 seedling trees of Pterocarpus macrocarpus (Padauk), 1,000 trees of Neem, 100 trees of Eugenia, 100 trees of Acacia mangium and, other 500 trees. — Sein Kyaw/GNLM

MoC reports: trade deficit shrinks to $235.76 mln as of 5 March

MYANMAR'S trade gap has significantly narrowed to US$235.76 million in the financial year 2020-2021 from just $926.57 million registered in the corresponding period of the 2019-2020FY, according to data provided by the Ministry of Commerce.

Between 1 October and 5 March in the current FY, Myanmar's external trade drastically plunged to $13.548 billion from $17.226 billion recorded in the year-ago period.

While exports were estimated at $6.65 billion, imports were valued at $6.89 billion this FY. Compared to the FY2019-2020, exports showed a drop of over $1.49 billion, while imports fell by $2.18 billion.

Myanmar witnessed a slump in exports triggered by the coronavirus pandemic. Moreover, the country cannot hold jade emporiums last year. As a result of this, export income plummeted, according to Myanmar Trade Promotion Organization.

Both sea trade and border trade dropped amid the coronavirus impacts and political changes. The neighbouring countries tightened border security and limited trading time to contain the virus's spread. Pandemic-induced container shortage pushed up the freight rates to almost triple in Myanmar, causing delays for traders.

At present, some ocean liners suspended cargo transport from Myanmar in recent days. The cargo transport will double or triple if we conduct the trade with small ships. It could harm the export sector somehow, according to Myanmar Mercantile Marine Development Association.

"The closure of private banks and the current political instability wreaks havoc on trade," an exporter stressed.

Myanmar exports agricultural products, animal products, minerals, forest products, and finished industrial goods. At the same time, it imports capital goods, raw industrial materials, and consumer goods.

The country's export sector relies more on the agricultural and manufacturing sectors. The Ministry of Commerce is endeavouring to boost export under the World Trade Organization's rules, enhance value-added production and competitiveness, reduce export barriers and provide trade financing services. The government is trying to reduce the trade deficit by screening luxury import items and boosting exports. The country mainly imports essential goods, construction materials, capital goods, hygienic material and supporting products for export promotion and import substitution.

Myanmar's trade deficit was pegged at $1.3 billion in the 2019-2020FY, $1.14 billion in the 2018-2019 FY, $1.3 billion in the previous mini-budget period (April-September, 2018), $3.9 billion in the 2017-2018FY, $5.3 billion in the 2016-2017FY, and $5.4 billion in the 2015-2016FY, according to statistics released by the Central Statistical Organization.

Under the National Planning Law for the Financial Year 2020-2021, Myanmar intends to reach an export target of US$16 billion and import at $18 billion.

The Ministry of Commerce has adhered to its policy reform depending on the State and people's requirements. Moreover, a series of trade liberalization and openness for policy development have been introduced for enhancing a more viable trade environment. The private sector plays a prominent role in Myanmar's market-oriented economic system. The ministry is highlighting free and fair trade, ensuring product safety and quality goods and services. — HH/GNLM

To peaceful protestors

By Maung Phyu Lay

Some of the media express the security forces use violence against peaceful protestors. Then, the western countries accused the security forces like the violence against the protestors for the restoration of democracy are such abhorrent manners. The security forces are also accused of using brutalities against protestors locally.

Therefore, I think people should consider whether they are staging a strike peacefully. Those protesting peacefully should take into account this issue.

Blocking the roads, set fire to tires, making roadblocks, using catapults, Molotov cocktail, hand-made bomb and hand-made guns seem to threaten the innocent people and community peace, and so do these doings mean peaceful protests?

The people raid the police station, attack the security forces and make arson at government building, public and private enterprise buildings and factories by blocking the ways to stop the security forces and firefighters from reaching the incident places.

Do the moves like thinking of enemies with those who do not join CDM, making threats to those who do not protest and committing social punishment, including murder, meaning peaceful protest?

Insulting banking staff and government staff by destroying the governmental building, not opening the banks, shouting slangs to fail the government mechanism with successful CDM, and convincing the youths to take to the streets really mean peaceful protest manners?

There are so many things to say. They violate the Constitution and existing law to destroy the peace and tranquillity of the State and the rule of law and make people feel insecure. Are these manners peaceful protest?

Those staging peaceful protest should think about it.

Insulting banking staff and government staff by destroying the governmental building, not opening the banks, shouting slangs to fail the government mechanism with successful CDM, and convincing the youths to take to the streets really mean peaceful protest manners?

Do the unscrupulous persons stand with you? Do they show off their appearance? Do you know who they are? Did you ever think why did they commit such incitements to unrest riots with what purposes, hope and beliefs? Do you know they are standing with illegal assistance? Do you believe these unlawful organizations without any legitimacy?

The ones who face the hardships are the people, including innocent young students. They have to face fears and casualties daily. The people are facing troubles.

Therefore, negative thoughts should end. There should not be nonsense movements that can affect the country and people any more. The incitement to youths leading to wrong ways should be stopped.

It is better to know what is happening in the country, the current ruling officials' performances and their responsibilities and accountabilities rather than believing the negative incitement.

Don't say such doings represent the desire of entire people and attitude of whole people. It is totally wrong. There are many people who disagree with today's protest. Some people also want to know why the government does not take decisive actions against those people. You should understand and agree with these situations.

Therefore, we should stop all engagements that affect the country and people. We should fulfil the wishes of people who want to stay peacefully. Why do not we think about the positive things for the sake of the country and people?

May the country and people be safe and peaceful.

Australia sees first population drop since WWI

AUSTRALIA'S population has declined for the first time in more than a century as pandemic-induced border closures stemmed the flow of overseas migrants, according to figures released yesterday.

The Australian Bureau of Statistics said the population grew by less than one per cent in the year to September 2020, and actually declined in the last recorded quarter.

"The last time we saw population decline was the year to December 1916, during World War I," said the bureau's Demography Director Phil Browning.

For centuries, Australia's economic growth has been built on mining and agriculture and fuelled by several waves of mass migration from Europe, Asia and beyond.

But the country, the world's largest island with only 25.7 million people, effectively sealed itself off from the rest of the world at the start of the COVID-19 pandemic. The measures – coupled with aggressive coronavirus testing, tracing and snap lockdowns – have limited COVID-19 infections and allowed the economy to open up with limited restrictions.

"Decreases to overseas migration have been observed over the last two quarters," Browning said. —AFP ■

To young people at the forefront

By Shwe Yunn

Myanmar has been described as a young country for its larger portion of young people in the country. The saying "Youth today, senior tomorrow" is widely known in Myanmar. Moreover, "Young people are the future of the country" is the statement every politician repeatedly uses.

We cannot forget the importance of parents, teachers, and good friends who set guidelines for those young people can achieve a bright future. In Myanmar's political situation today, the role of Generation Z has been given special attention. Although it seems that letting young people take to the streets is to provide them with favour to be involved in a political role, it is not 100 per cent right.

It is true that young people are active, creative and are quick learners. However, they still do not have substantial experience. As the saying goes, "learn at first age", the young people who are in just their first age of life should study in order to have an easy life. They must decide which is right and which is wrong with their own review of the current political situation. Facebook, used by most of them, cannot be their leader, nor every content on Facebook can be true. It is time for them to decide everything only after careful consideration.

It does not seem the right thing that young people are used as a human shield in protests during the unstable political situation. But, it is sad to see them wearing clothes that make them visible in demonstrations. The egoism of those who are using young people for their benefits can be seen selling huts, peacock flags, bags and other accessories.

People should be aware of those who can love the country only on Facebook are continuously inciting young people to take to the streets, but they remain at the back. Letting the young people at the forefront in confronting the security forces are actually destroying their future.

As a nation to be built as a federal democratic nation, it is very important for them to respect and follow democracy standards. Democracy policy is to guarantee respect for human rights and rules to be followed for the entire essence of democracy. We should consider the byproducts of refusing to follow the rules of democracy. Any act conducted outside of the law, outside of the rules, will not issue good result.

According to democracy, everyone has the full rights to hold their own opinions and express them freely. Although young people have freedom of speech, freedom of expression, freedom of association according to the standards of democracy, the involvement of those who do not respect or follow them can turn the situation into wild and violent.

At present, it has been over a month since the Civil Disobedience Movement (CDM) brought about acts against the democracy standards, which led to more confrontations of young people from the frontline with security forces. As confrontation never results in good, young people must consider it before doing any activities, leading to the destruction of their future and ambition. Moreover, after listening to encouragement as heroes, parents who do not prevent their children will have to take their rage at themselves when they experience an unexpected situation.

It is necessary for young people to be aware of their incitements to push them to the forefront and commit crimes. Those who stay behind the instigation are the knives to stab in the back, and I wish young people could study the current situation with careful consideration.

India to produce 200 million doses of Sputnik V

THE developer of Russia's Sputnik V coronavirus vaccine said Friday it had signed a partnership with an India-based drugmaker for the production of 200 million doses of the two-dose jab.

The Russian Direct Investment Fund (RDIF), which backed the development of Sputnik V, said in a statement it had partnered with Stelis Biopharma "to produce and supply a minimum of 200 million doses of the Russian Sputnik V vaccine." Stelis Biopharma is expected to be able to start supplying the vaccine from the second half of the year.

RDIF, added that Stelis – the biopharma unit of global pharmaceutical company Strides – will work with the Russian wealth fund to provide supplies "beyond the initial agreement." RDIF head Kirill Dmitriev said that the "significant vaccine volumes" produced with Stelis "will help widen access to the vaccine on a global scale." RDIF said Friday that 52 countries have approved the use of Russia's Sputnik V, named after the Soviet-era satellite.

Moscow registered the jab in August before large-scale clinical trials, but leading medical journal The Lancet has since said it is safe and over 90% effective. —AFP ■

EU launches legal action against UK over Gibraltar tax

BRUSSELS launched legal action on Friday to force Britain to recover €100 million in tax exemptions for multinational firms operating in Gibraltar. European Commission vice-president Margrethe Vestager said the UK had failed to claw back the sum despite the EU deeming the tax breaks “illegal state aid”.

The sum, equivalent to $119 million, is small relative to many EU state subsidy cases, but the case is the latest in a string of spats between the EU and post-Brexit Britain. “The aid granted by Gibraltar in the form of corporate tax exemption for passive interest and royalties gave an unfair advantage to some multinational companies,” Vestager said. “More than two years after the Commission adopted this decision, the aid has still not been recovered in full and sufficient progress has not been made in restoring competition,” she said. “That is why we have decided to refer the United Kingdom to the Court of Justice for failing to implement this decision.” The United Kingdom left the European Union last year, but the case dates back to a period before Brexit over which Brussels says the European Court of Justice still has jurisdiction. ## Bank of Japan holds negative rates, tweaks easing policy

The central bank is attempting to tailor its policies to respond to the pandemic and keep on track towards its longstanding goal of two percent inflation. PHOTO: AFP

THE Bank of Japan on Friday maintained its negative interest rate and tweaked its monetary easing programme as it battles to boost inflation and shore up the pandemic-hit economy. The adjustment, which marginally expands the fluctuation in long-term rates for 10-year bonds that the bank will accept, is seen as a potential forerunner to further tweaks in policy. The bank also said it would allow more flexibility in its stock purchases, dropping a target for its intervention in the Tokyo stock market, which has strongly recovered since crashing in spring 2020 as the pandemic began to bite. The bank’s policies were otherwise largely left untouched after its two-day meeting, with an interest rate of -0.1 per cent left intact, as well as an annual ceiling on stock purchases. Tokyo’s Nikkei index tumbled 1.5 per cent with selling picking up after the announcement. The central bank is attempting to tailor its policies to respond to the pandemic and keep on track towards its longstanding goal of two percent inflation, which remains far from sight. “It is important to strike an appropriate balance between maintaining market functioning and controlling interest rates by allowing interest rates to fluctuate to a certain degree,” it said. “For the time being, the bank will closely monitor the impact of Covid-19 and will not hesitate to take additional easing measures if necessary,” it added. Bank governor Haruhiko Kuroda denied any immediate plan to consider an exit strategy from the easing policy. “On top of the coronavirus situation, we have yet to realize the two-per cent price target,” he told reporters.—AFP ■

Energy giant Eni offers to pay $14m to settle Congo graft inquiry

ITALIAN energy giant Eni said Thursday it had filed a request with a Milan court to pay 14 million dollars (11.8 million euros) to settle an investigation into corruption in Congo-Brazzaville levied at the company and one of its managers. According to Italian media, the probe was first launched in 2017, and relates to payment of suspected bribes when oil licences in Congo-Brazzaville were being renewed in 2015. To secure renewal, Eni was accused of agreeing to sell parts of its licence to a shell corporation maintained by Congolese public officials. In a statement, Eni said the request was not an admission of guilt, “but an initiative aimed at avoiding the continuation (of) a judicial process that would entail further expenditure of resources from Eni and all the involved parties”. The court reducing the alleged offence from international corruption to undue inducement had paved the way for a settlement, the company explained. Eni refused to divulge to AFP the name of the manager implicated. The news comes the day after an Italian court cleared Eni and Shell of charges related to a major oil exploration deal in Nigeria in which $1.1 billion allegedly ended up in the pockets of corrupt politicians and middlemen. Among the 13 individual defendants was Eni’s chief executive, Claudio Descalzi, for whom prosecutors sought an eight-year prison term.—AFP ■

Ingapu, Thushintakayuppi, Naungyoe battle

By Maung Tha (Archaeology)

Translated by Than Tun Aung

INGAPU, the town in Hinthada District of Ayeyawady Region, was famous thanks to the related history of Mon King Thushintakayuppi and Naungyoe battle.

Naungyoe battle was very famous in 1537 AD due to the military tactic of destroying pontoons by General Kyawhtin Nawrahta, who would become King Bayintnaung. Mon King Thushintakayuppi, who was defeated in the Naungyoe battle, passed away, and it was assumed that his remains were buried in Ingapu.

Historical background of Ingapu

Ingapu, 24 miles from Hinthada, is located on the right bank of Kanyin Creek, which flows into Ngawun River. The town is located in the historic Shwehsandaw Pagoda, the tomb of Mon King Thushintakayuppi and the unspoiled remains of four monks. The town was a base of establishing Dvara Gana of Theravada Buddhism in Myanmar and was home to Yonsin Village, the native land of Bo Aung Kyaw, who fell in 1938.

According to the historical records, the title of Ingapu was derived from Ingapura, Okpo and Ingapu. It was just a small village and it then became a town in 10th century, according to the Myanmar Encyclopaedia.

According to the documents of the Ministry of Home Affairs, King Thamuddagawtha and queen, daughter of King Okkalapa Ohnmadanti, established 32 cities of Pathein, including Ingapu. Prince Ingapo was given to govern the city, so the city was named Ingapura. Later, the city was ruled by Thihabo, Maha Thihabo and Maha Seiktabo successively.

In the reign of King Alaungmintaya, Ingapu station was ruled by Thihabo. In the time of Seiktabo, Ingapura was moved to Okpo. It is the area of current Ingapu where Princess Ohnmadanti made bricks to be used in building Shwehsandaw Pagoda.

After Seiktabo, his son U San Min ruled Ingapu. In 1269 ME in the time of the British colonial era, U Maung Maung Sein, son of U San Min became the administrator of Ingapu together with younger brother U Maung Maung Arnt, who served as head of the city. In the same year, the town was of-

Historic Naungyoe Battle

King Bayintnaung (1551-1581 AD), who established the Second Myanmar Empire, served as a general before the life of the king to lead fighting in the Naungyoe battle with victory.

In 1532 AD, King Tabinshwehti reigned over Toungoo while King Thushintakayuppi ruled Hanthawady. In 1537 AD, King Tabinshwehti conquered Hanthawady, so King Thushintakayuppi evaded to Pyay. The king attempted to cooperate with Pyay King Narapati to fight against King Tabinshwehti. So, King Tabinshwehti marched to Pyay, and General Kyawhtin Nawrahta was ordered to lead the troops.

Kyawhtin Nawrahta

gathered military boats from Hanthawady and formed seven boat units. King Tabinshwehti marched along the waterway while Kyawhtin Nawrahta marched along the land routes. On arrival at Naungyoe, Kyawhtin Nawrahta based his troops on the bank and ordered his servant to climb the highest tree for viewing the enemies. In that regard, Byeenya Dala and Minye Aung Naing deployed five troops with elephants and horses on the opposite bank of Naungyoe. Such an amount of enemy was larger than those of Kyawhtin Nawrahta.

Without trembling, Kyawhtin Nawrahta prepared his troops for fighting. He remarked, “Nature of battle did not depend on strengths but capabilities.” After the troops of Kyawhtin Nawrahta had crossed the river, Tuyinraza conveying the order of King Tabinshwehti, arrived there, saying that all troops were ordered not to launch fighting and to wait for the king, and when the king arrived there, fighting would be launched.

Kyawhtin Nawrahta urged

Tuyinraza to submit the report that the battle was over with victory. And, the general ordered to destroy pontoons to remove the doubts over the battle whether they would win or lose. Some commanders supplicated that even the battle was not launched, the report on victory over the battle was submitted to the king. If they faced loss in the battle, they would have difficulties due to the destruction of pontoons.

Kyawhtin Nawrahta noted, “If pontoons are not destroyed, you all would have the wish to run into the pontoons when face loss in the fighting. If you don’t have any pontoons, you all will bravely fight against enemies in the battle.” In fact, it was the nature of heroes.

“I ordered to submit a report of victory over the battle before the fighting. If we are defeated, we don’t dare to face scolding of the king. If we lose to enemies in the fighting, we are never alive. When we are dead, the king will not scold us.” “If we win the battle, we will be alive. If we lose, we will die. When we are dead, how will the king scold us?” Due to the dynamism of strategic and military tactics as well as the psychological warfare of Kyawhtin Nawrahta, they won over the enemies in Naungyoe battle.

One day after the battle, King Tabinshwehti arrived the scene, asking: “Kyawhtin Nawrahta! You didn’t wait for me to fight against the enemies. Did you disturb my mission?”

Kyawhtin Nawrahta replied: “Naungyoe battle was not deserved for his majesty king but for our servants only. It was the fighting between the servants of both sides. In the future, many battles will come out for his majesty king. His Majesty should fight the troops of Hanthawady King, please.” And seized elephants, horses, weapons and prisoners of war were handed over to the king.

Due to high satisfaction, King Tabinshwehti presented his ruby bracelet and ring to Kyawhtin Nawrahta as rewards, ordered to govern Hline City and conferred Bayintnaung title on Kyawhtin Nawrahta.

Bayingnaung became crown prince in 1541 and came onto the throne on 13 January 1551. He established the second Myanmar empire and passed away on 12 November 1581 at 66 years old.

Scholars guessed Naungyoe battle might be located near Pyay. The bank crossed by troops of General Kyawhtin Nawrahta might be located near Einme, showing a map by historian Dr Than Tun. Some scholars assumed Naungyoe might be located between Dahka River and Minmanaing Creek. Some scholars guessed Naungyoe might take position near Dauntgyi Village, the southern bank of the Dahka River, west of Einme.

Tomb of King Thushintakayuppi

When King Tabinshwehti returned to Hanthawady, King Thushintakayuppi came back to Ingapu from Pyay to recruit troops. When he arrived in Ingapu, he heard information that an elephant lived there. So, he tried to hunt the elephant, but he passed away in Ingapu with a fever the same night.

As the king’s remains were cremated in Ingapu, some scholars assumed that the remains might be buried between the east and south-east corners of the platform of Shwehsandaw Pagoda. An elephant statue heading to eastward can be seen in the place where the tomb of King Thushintakayuppi might be buried. The elephant statue does not turn to the pagoda but to the eastward.

Some scholars assumed ministers built an elephant statue in commemoration of the hobby of King Thushintakayuppi in hunting elephants with the further symbol to miss native Hanthawady. Now, the venue and elephant statue are under the preservation of Shwehsandaw Pagoda board of trustees.

King Thushintakayuppi fell into the trick of Toungoo King Tabinshwehti and killed his reliable Byeenya Law and Byeenya Kyan. So, he missed the chance to victory over the battle and ran away to Pyay and then passed away in Ingapu.

TWO group matches of the Asian Football Confederation Cup: named Group H and I, will be held in Singapore following an official announcement made by the AFC recently.

Two Myanmar representing teams have a chance to participate in the tourney to be held in Singapore.

Singapore will be hosting Group I with Geylang International FC of Singapore, Kaya FC-Iloilo of the Philippines and Terengganu FC of Malaysia and either Shan United FC or Ayeyawady United FC of Myanmar.

England boss Southgate says footballers should be offered vaccine soon

LONDON — England manager Gareth Southgate says footballers should be offered coronavirus vaccines soon as they are being asked to take risks by playing regularly during the pandemic.

The UK, hit hard by the Covid-19 crisis, this week passed the mark of 25 million jabs delivered as part of a rapid rollout.

Footballers do not fall into the categories vaccinated so far, based on factors such as age and existing medical conditions, but have been travelling for club and international matches since the sport resumed last year. Southgate feels a strain could be taken off the state-run National Health Service (NHS) if football were able to step in and begin its own vaccination programme.

The England boss, speaking after announcing his squad for World Cup qualifiers, admitted a looming vaccine supply shortfall could prove a stumbling block.

"My view would have been we were close to getting to the point where it would have been acceptable for professional sportsmen to be on that list," he said. "We are asking them to keep playing. —AFP ■

Man Utd to face Granada in Europa League quarter-finals

LONDON — Manchester United were paired with Spanish side Granada in Friday's draw for the quarter-finals of the Europa League, while Arsenal will take on Slavia Prague.

Ole Gunnar Solskjaer's United, who beat AC Milan in the last 16, are due to play away in the first leg on April 8 but it remains to be seen where that match will take place.

The Old Trafford club faced Spanish opponents in Real Sociedad in the last 32 but the first leg of that tie was moved to Turin in Italy because of restrictions on travel from the UK to Spain as a result of the pandemic.

Meanwhile, Ajax will face Roma with the winners of that quarter-final playing either United or Granada in the last four. United beat Ajax in the 2017 Europa League final.

Arsenal are set to host Slavia in the first leg of their quarter-final and will be wary of the runaway Czech league leaders who have eliminated Leicester City and Scottish champions Rangers in the last two rounds.

However if the Gunners get through they could face their former coach Unai Emery in the semi-finals. —AFP ■

ACAPULCO — Top-seeded Stefanos Tsitsipas clawed his way past Felix Auger-Aliassime 7-5, 4-6, 6-3 on Thursday to reach the semi-finals of the ATP hardcourt tournament in Acapulco.

The world number five from Greece will take on Italian qualifier Lorenzo Musetti, who defeated fifth-seeded Bulgarian Grigor Dimitrov 6-4, 7-6 (7/3).

Tsitsipas dropped his opening service game against the seventh-seeded Canadian, clawing back with a break before finally reeling off the last six points of the opening set. He couldn't maintain the momentum, however, going down an early break again in the second set as Auger-Aliassime leveled the match.

The third set was a tense affair and it was Auger-Aliassime who cracked, coughing up back-to-back double faults to hand Tsitsipas the first break of the frame for a 5-3 lead and a chance to serve out the match.

Tsitsipas, who is vying to reach a first final of 2021, reached the semi-finals at the Australian Open in February and at Rotterdam earlier this month, but is coming off a quarter-final ouster by 93rd-ranked Pierre-Hugues Herbert in Marseille. —AFP ■
